

Dr. A. Jacobi Dead; Famous As Physician

Exiled From Prussia for Political Ideals, He Soon Became Noted Throughout World as Practitioner

Succumbs at Lake George

Specialist in Diseases of Children; His 89 Works Are Medical Authority

Dr. Abraham Jacobi, famous in many lands as one of the most eminent medical practitioners of his day, and one of the last of the German republican expatriates who followed Carl Schurz to America after the disasters of 1848, died suddenly Thursday night at his summer home at Bolton Landing, on Lake George. He was eighty-nine years old.

Telegrams from Lake George stated that the body would be brought to his home at 19 East Forty-seventh Street to-morrow.

The funeral will take place from the home at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon. Dr. Jacobi was apparently in excellent health until Thursday afternoon. He fainted at 4 o'clock, and remained semi-conscious thereafter until his death at 10 o'clock that night.

Dr. Jacobi was a former medical associate, who went with him to Bolton Landing early in June, was with Dr. Jacobi when he died.

Caught Fever of Revolt
Abraham Jacobi was born at Hartum, in Westphalia, May 6, 1830, and it was a year before the revolutionary era of 1848 convulsed the Continent that he began his medical studies at the University of Göttingen. When the storm broke the next year he joined the revolutionists. For this he was arrested and imprisoned at Minden. For two years he was in solitary confinement. A period of liberation followed, which he improved by continuing his studies at the University of Bonn, where in 1851 he received the degree of M. D. Soon thereafter he again was arrested and subjected to imprisonment and trial for high treason, at Cologne and at Berlin, until 1853, when he was permitted, with many compatriots, to come to America as political exiles.

Among his closest friends and associates here was Carl Schurz. He arrived in New York poor, unknown, but endowed with genius, and the last named fact soon overcame the others. His ability was speedily recognized and was utilized for the welfare of the public.

Progress Was Rapid
Before he had been seven years he was appointed professor of the diseases of children at the University of Medicine in the old New York Medical College. This place he filled with much success from 1850 to 1855, when he left it for a similar place in the medical department of New York University, then called the University of the City of New York. Five years later he again returned to the University of Medicine, where he was professor of diseases of children in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, the medical department of Columbia University, which he actively filled until 1902, when he became professor emeritus.

For more than half a century he was a leading member of the staff of Mount Sinai Hospital, and he did long and valuable service in the German Hospital and other institutions. For some years he edited "The American Journal of Obstetrics and Diseases of Women and Children," was president of the New York Pathological Society, the New York Obstetrical Society, the New York County Medical Society, the New York Academy of Medicine, the American Pediatric Society, the Association of American Physicians, the American Climatological Society, and, at the age of eighty-two, the American Medical Association.

His private practice was extensive and most successful. As a lecturer and essay writer he was profuse and convincing. He was the author of a number of books of standard merit, "Diet and Its Derangements," 1862; "The Raising and Education of Abandoned Children in Europe," 1870; "Influence of Children," 1872; "Dietetics," 1875; "Treatise on Diphtheria," 1870; "Pathology of the Thymus Gland," 1880; "Therapeutics of Infancy and Childhood," 1896-1903; "Intestinal Disease," 1902; "Colicacina Jacobi," 8 volumes, 1909.

Invited to Berlin
One of the most significant tributes paid to him was the urgent invitation, which was given to him in October, 1903, to become professor of pediatrics in the University of Berlin, associated with which was the direction of the Children's Clinic in the great Charity Hospital there. This place was offered to him practically by the royal government of Prussia, the government which years before had imprisoned him, tried him for high treason and sent him into exile. Without a moment's hesitation Dr. Jacobi declined it, by cable. "I am," he said to a friend later, "an American citizen, and I do not care to change my citizenship. I am bound by every tie of gratitude and affection to remain where I am. I look upon this offer as significant of two things. First, it proves that among men of science there is no question of nationality. Second, it shows that in American scholarship there is something worthy of the recognition of the best scientific minds of the world."

Dr. Jacobi's scholarship was recognized by the great universities of America in the bestowal of the degree of LL.D. by Michigan, Columbia, Yale, Harvard and Jefferson.

Dr. Mary Putnam, daughter of George Palmer Putnam, founder of the publishing house which bears his name. She was one of the first women physicians of this country, and was the first woman ever admitted to the Ecole de Médecine, in Paris, from which she was graduated in 1871. She died in 1908.

On his arrival here Dr. Jacobi established an office on the East Side, and in that region he was ever thereafter beloved as "the professor" who was ready always to relieve the sufferings of poor folk.

"Society would be much better off if many persons were not born. What I want is a smaller but better population," he said in advocating birth control.

Welshman Enlists in Army to Fit Himself for Civilian Career

Speaking with an accent that was a credit to his birthplace of Berry Dock, South Wales, Ilton M. P. John, a jackie in the royal navy, came into the army recruiting office yesterday and enlisted in the Motor Transport Corps. He had seen action at Heligoland and the Near East with the British naval forces and later as a field artilleryman with the British army in France. After his discharge he came to America to take up civilian life.

"I soon realized," he said, "that a man without a trade or a college education has little chance to get a good job. I decided the best way to make good was to enlist in the army and learn a trade."

Yesterday sixty-eight men were accepted by the army out of 151 applicants.

Better Housing Conditions Are Promised on His Kensington Duchy

The Prince of Wales is taking a keen interest in the housing improvement schemes on the Kensington estate of the duchy and it is said that building will shortly begin, says "The London Daily Mail."

Minimum floor space for sitting room, bedroom and kitchen, not less than 12 feet by 12 feet 6 inches.

Provision for drying and airing clothes.

Electric light or gas in every room and bathroom.

Other suggestions are that there should be gardens for the children and communal washhouses.

Wanamaker Celebrates Eighty-first Birthday

Merchant Suggests National Sesqui-Centennial at Philadelphia in 1926

PHILADELPHIA, July 11.—John Wanamaker suggested to-day in an address at the celebration of his eighty-first birthday at his store here, a national sesqui-centennial celebration at Fairmount Park, in this city in 1926. The suggestion was made as a climax to a history of the development of the country, which had been played during Mr. Wanamaker's lifetime.

The merchant was at his store at 9 a. m. as usual, and found his desk stacked with congratulatory messages. His older employees were waiting to shake his hand, and apparently were no less eager than Mr. Wanamaker for the handshake. After this reception Mr. Wanamaker listened to an organ recital in the store, in the course of which his favorite selections were played.

The Tribune Fresh Air Fund

Harlem was translated to Forty-second Street yesterday morning—or it looked like that to the people in the Grand Central Terminal at about 8:30 a. m.

It wasn't migration of Harlem buildings that gave the impression—their morning rush, and fast as their usual morning rush, but the fact that the Harlemites! That was something else again.

Actually there were only 250 Harlemites, but they were all small boys, full of vigor and enthusiasm.

They were very much underfoot and they were loaded down with bags and bundles, baseball bats and other athletic paraphernalia.

Everybody Good Natured
There was Sam and George, Rastus and Eph and Tom, Dick and Harry. They bumped into passersby and passersby turned to growl, but remained to grin when they realized who the bumpers were.

The 250 were off for a vacation, and could be seen in the city for the first time since they began their vacation, even though there were no green trees in sight; so they scrambled and jumped and ran and jolted until they got to the 35th Street station.

There was a sign on the platform, "The Fresh Air Fund," and the boys heaved a sigh of relief through their grins.

It was the Tribune Fresh Air Fund's second excursion for the summer. Knapp Farm, made up entirely of negro youngsters from Harlem, except for a slight sprinkling of boys from Brooklyn.

The sending of the party was inspired by the boys' work committee of the New York Rotary Club, which has been interested in the Harlem boy problem.

Cooperation with the Urban League for Negroes C. J. Atkinson, chairman of the boys' work committee, and Alexander Campbell, an assistant, agreed to select a group of negro lads for the Fresh Air Fund.

The Fresh Air Fund would make the arrangements for the vacation. After strenuous work the boys were collected, given a physical examination and sent off. They are to remain at the farm for two weeks.

Others Start Vacations
On the same train with the boys were fifty other lads bound for vacations at St. Heloise at Interlaken, Mass.

The fund also had a party of twenty small girls to be guests at Elm Cottage at Fairfield, Conn., a party of eight crippled girls to spend three weeks at Devonport, Devon, England.

Y. and seventeen boys and girls to be entertained in private families at Barrytown and Red Hook, N. Y.

One-Piecers Go in Newark
Newark works the one-piece bathing suit for women without a moral qualm. In fact, officially, the city is for it.

John J. Gillen, Deputy Director of Public Affairs, in charge of the municipal bathhouses, gave orders yesterday for the replacement of the old style bathing suits, saying that the one-piece, being more comfortable, is a swim in, undoubtedly would attract larger patronage for the bathhouses.

Heads Mission Crusade
The Rev. Thomas Burke, C. S. P., newly chosen superior of the Paulist Fathers, has placed himself at the head of the Catholic Students' Mission in this part of the country.

This drive, which started originally at the Apostolic Mission House, Washington, a Paulist institution of the Catholic University, has now extended to Catholic students in other counties.

The campaign is chiefly for the purpose of getting young men to give themselves for the work of the Church in domestic and foreign missionary fields. Originally most of the Paulist missionary work abroad was accomplished by the French. The war stopped their efforts, and Americans, under Father Burke, mean to carry on in their place.

Give a Thought To Astor Place

HE'S a brave person who can dart across Astor Place in a second. Eight streets converge there and make it one of the busiest crossings in the city. More than 45,000 passenger automobiles pass on Lafayette Street daily. Thousands of commercial trucks come up from the cross streets and a continuous procession of trolley cars adds to the congestion.

Patrolman Emil Wagner, of Traffic Division A, estimates 75,000 as the number of people who pass his corner daily. "Many," he says, "are careful. But there are some who simply don't seem to care when or how they cross the street. It will be a fine thing when the new 'jaywalker' ruling goes into effect."

Safety poles have been put up and part of the place is zoned off from vehicular traffic. Inspector D. Christie, employed by the New York Railways Company, "wants further protection. 'Let us have tunnels,' he says, 'as they have in London. The people like them and they feel safe when they have to cross a crowded corner.'"

Republican Victory in 1920 Is Predicted By Chairman Hays

Forecast Based on Observations in West, Where He Finds People Appreciate Economies of Congress

PHILADELPHIA, July 11.—A Republican victory in the next Presidential election was predicted this afternoon by Will H. Hays, chairman of the Republican National Committee, who came here to confer with Senator Penrose.

The economies effected by the present Congress and its results along other lines, Mr. Hays declared, have had their effect on the people generally.

"I have just returned from the West," he said, "and from discussions there and the general atmosphere of what is going on in the country, I am convinced that the people are now making up their minds to elect a Republican Congress."

"The fact that Congress has already saved one and a half billions of dollars by cuts in the appropriation measures is highly appreciated."

"In the closing hours of the last Congress the Republicans were accused of filibustering when they defeated appropriations bills. Now they are saving them by not making would not be possible if they had not blocked the measures in the last Congress."

Mr. Hays said it was too early to speculate on the Presidential campaign. He said that economy in the administration of government would be one of the platforms of the party.

Plays and Players
Florence Moore is soon to appear in a new bedroom farce by Willard Mack and Hilliard Booth, called "Breakfast in Bed." Rehearsals are already under way.

Rehearsals are already under way for the play "The Girl Who Came to Supper," which will be on August 8. In the cast are Will Deming, Dorothy Mortimer, Leon Gordon, Tommy Meade, Jules Espailley, Harry Hamilton and others. The play is being staged by Bertram Harrison.

Charles Hayman, general manager for the Alhambra Theatre, said yesterday on the Mauretians. This is the first time Mr. Hayman has crossed the Atlantic since Mr. Frohman was drowned when the Lusitania was sunk by a German U-boat May 7, 1915. He is going abroad now on business for the company, which is preparing for an unusually active season.

Strand on Sunday.

Suzanne Caubert, a protégé of Mme. Sarah Bernhardt and erstwhile star of the Theatre des Varieties in Paris, has been engaged for the new Theatre Francaise, which will occupy the Belmont Theatre in the autumn.

On Monday at the Broadhurst Theatre George Broadhurst will present "The Crimson Alibi." Mr. Broadhurst took a novel of Octavus Roy Cohen's for his guide and made it over into a drama with a prologue, four acts and seven scenes. The play is by George Hunter, William Thompson, George Graham, Robert Kelly, Robert Barrat, John Elmer, Roy LaRue, Jack Kane, Paul Kane, Edith Isidore, Irma M. Cohen, Miss Mary Fox and Miss Catherine Cozzens. The play is being staged by Lillian Trimble Bradley.

Mae Murray will return to the speaking stage in October in a comedy by Edgar Allan Wolfe.

Mme. Bertha Kalich has ended her season in "The Riddle Woman" and is now at work on her autobiography, which is scheduled for publication in the last autumn. It has the title of "The Making of an American Actress."

Again the 44th Street Theatre will have to submit to an ordeal. It has been all fixed over when the "Gaieties" moved in and it looked at least ten years younger, but the new operation will give more space. The rear boxes have been removed and the stage is enlarged. So after this it won't be necessary for so many people to stand during the performance.

Wage Measure Fought By Federal Employes

Good Amendment to Nolan Bill Would Bar Many From Increased Pay

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Organized Federal employes are making a strenuous effort to defeat the amendment to the Nolan bill for a minimum wage for government workers offered by Representative Good, of Iowa. This amendment would keep thousands of girls and women now getting the temporary increase in salary granted by Congress on July 1 from the additional benefit of this bonus if the minimum wage goes into effect.

The Good amendment provides that wherever the minimum wage law applies the temporary increase granted by Congress to all salaries of $2,500 and less shall be considered as part of the base pay. The effect of this is to deny to the employees receiving between $900 and $1,080 at least a part of the $240 increase allowed by Uncle Sam because of the war.

The Nolan bill will come up next Wednesday. The Good amendment must yet be voted upon by the House before it becomes a part of the Nolan measure.

Candidates Asked By Woman to Give Stand on Big Issues

Questionnaire Sent to All Who Seek Assembly or Aldermanic Seats; Dry and Suffrage Points Put

The women voters of New York City opened their first political campaign yesterday with the distribution of a questionnaire to all nominees for the Assembly and the Board of Aldermen. The questions include prohibition, the eight-hour day and equal pay, and the abolition of party emblems on the ballot.

"The women themselves differ on these questions," said Miss Mary Garrett Hay, chairman of the New York City League of Women Voters, "so there is no reason why any candidate should hesitate to give a full and frank answer. This is in no sense a women's platform, but merely a list of subjects in which women voters are interested and which we think should be made issues in the coming election."

Legislative Quiz
The questions sent out to would-be members of the Assembly were as follows:

Are you for or against:
Legislation for the strict enforcement of the prohibition amendment?
The maintenance of the direct primary system for the nomination of candidates?
Equal pay for equal work for men and women and wages based upon occupation and not upon sex?

The establishment of a minimum wage commission with representatives of employers and employees and both men and women on it?
An eight-hour day for men and women in industry?

The granting by the state of the records of candidates of all parties and their dissemination among the registered voters?
An amendment to the state constitution allowing suffrage only to those who can read and write English?

Raising the age for compulsory school attendance to sixteen years?
An increased appropriation for teaching English to adults?

Legislation giving men and women equal participation in party organizations?
The establishment of a minimum wage commission with representatives of employers and employees and both men and women on it?

For the Aldermen
Nominees for the Board of Aldermen will be asked similar questions and in addition these:

Are you for or against:
Municipal ownership and control of public utilities?
The establishment of terminal markets?

An appropriation that the school houses may be kept open during the summer as day camps for the children and a supervisor in charge?
The use of the schools as recreation centers?

Authorizing certain classes of purchases without public letting? If, for what, are these classes?

Answers to these questions will be put on file at the office of the League of Women Voters, 372 Fifth Avenue, for the use of women voters.

U. S. Churchmen to Attend Mayflower Tri-Centennial

Large delegations of Congregationalists, Baptists and Presbyterians are to go to England and Holland next year to take part in the tri-centennial celebration of the sailing of the "Mayflower" for America.

A replica of the original ship is being constructed in England now. This will visit Holland and then sail to Plymouth, where preparations are now being made to erect a memorial hall to the Pilgrims.

A Soldier Says
SERGEANT HENRY CORDES, of the Fifth Guard Disciplinary Barracks, stationed at Governor's Island, has been in the service since 1898. He is a veteran of the Spanish-American War and is now serving his sixth enlistment.
